

Self Review

I learned a lot through this project, especially how to fix issues and avoid merge conflicts in GitHub by keeping the code organized and communicating well with teammates. The saying “practice makes perfect” really proved true for me. After completing the hamster hotel project, I found this one a bit easier, though both had their unique challenges. Through this project, I improved my skills with Bootstrap and learned how to create more beautiful and functional websites. Working in a team made the process smoother and more enjoyable. At first, I used to feel scared every time I got a new assignment, but now I am gaining confidence in my abilities. This experience has helped me realize the importance of teamwork, communication, and patience, and I feel more prepared to handle future web development projects with a positive attitude.
